

Tracking Evil

NORAD, NASA, not even all the combined world government radars can track an Angel's flight. Nor can they track the path of Satan.

Scripture notes that God separated light from darkness and said it was good. Could it be said that Light and Darkness is an opposite of Black and White? Man is known to fear the evils of dark? Rightfully so, an innocent child of White world fears darkness and the evil it brings until such time the child has been taught God's words.

Life is not black and white, nor can it be tracked.

There are two concurrent paths of life, current being mortal and the other leading to immortal life. Concurrency of life if lived in accordance to God dwells within the white light and in opposite, belief in the black darkness will not provide a path to everlasting peace but to an eternity of hellish pain. When one losses sight of light and travels blindly in darkness, just as an Angel cannot be tracked, only belief will suffice in knowing this dark path need not leads to God's House.

There is no logical reason to track a belief in one's soul, nor will any God believing mortal need to file an interstellar flight plan through the heavens, nor is it possible. For if a flight plan was required to reach God, such flight plan could only have been filed with God via the heart long before the journey began.

Belief is Choice

Good v Evil, God v Satan, Light v Dark, Black v White (White v Black)

Will Satan sacrifice many an innocent life to God to obtain one dark soul?

Certainly